

Statement of participation

Roger Moughames

has completed the free course including any mandatory tests for:

The business of football

This free 15-hour course investigated the business of football, exploring clubs' business models, employee motivation and the impact of globalisation.

Issue date: 8 April 2023

www.open.edu/openlearn

This statement does not imply the award of credit points nor the conferment of a University Qualification.
This statement confirms that this free course and all mandatory tests were passed by the learner.

Please go to the course on OpenLearn for full details:

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/money-business/the-business-football/content-section-overview>

COURSE CODE: BOF_2

The business of football

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/money-business/the-business-football/content-section-overview>

Course summary

This free course, The business of football, was produced by The Open University working in partnership with The English Football League Trust. If you are fascinated by men's and women's football and interested in discovering more about business and management, then this engaging and stimulating course is for you.

Learning outcomes

By completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- begin to understand the business of football and the internal and external business environment of football clubs
- identify factors most likely to motivate people to succeed in their work in different parts of the football business including leaders and managers influence on the working environment
- describe what makes teams more likely to succeed and how individuals can develop into more effective teams
- reflect on the meaning of globalisation and how this relates to the business of football
- identify how dimensions of power relate to football.

Completed study

The learner has completed the following:

Week 1

Football: a business like no other

Week 2

The secrets of motivation and teams

Week 3

Globalisation and power relationships